Employment Forecast for 2004

The Bureau of Economic and Business Research forecasts a 1.1% rise in nonagricultural employment in 2004, an increase of 12,000 new jobs. Total nonagricultural jobs will expand from 1,073,000 to 1,085,000. Based on the analysis in this article the employment change for each major sector is estimated, see below.

Declining Sector

Construction will be the only sector recording employment declines; however, the job loss will be slight—1,000 jobs—and occur primary in the third and fourth quarters.

Unchanged Sectors

Total employment in mining, manufacturing, wholesale trade, transportation, utilities and information will be effectively unchanged from 2003.

Growth Sectors

Retail trade employment will increase by 1%, which will reverse last year's decline. Retail sales will be up modestly in 2004 as Wal-Mart hires several hundred workers for their new stores opening in 2004. Financial services employment will increase but less than in 2003. Reduced mortgage activity will hold growth to 1% in 2004. Professional and business services employment will increase by 2% as this recovery sensitive sector (e.g., temporary work services) improves throughout the year. Education (private) and health services employment will grow at the 2003 rate of 3.9%. Leisure and hospitality will reverse the job losses of 2003 with a 1.5% gain in employment due to good ski season, improving leisure travel and stabilized business travel. Federal, state and local government will all grow at their 2003 rates of growth.
